MATTHIAS LECHNER (Art Director of Environments) collaborated to define the style of the film's environments and sets, and invented creative for how the animals inhabiting the magical world of Zootopia, sheltered, moved, played and lived together. He supervises the art department and provides artistic guidance within the design team, environment modeling and the environment look department.

Lechner joined Disney in 2012 as a freelance visual development artist from his home in Vancouver, working on a very early version of "Zootopia." As the project ramped up into full production, he relocated to Los Angeles two years later.

Prior to joining Disney, Lechner served as art director and/or production designer on a host of projects, including "Escape from Planet Earth" for Rainmaker Entertainment, as well as "Keinohhase Und Zweohrkueken" and "Laura's Star and the Dreammonsters"—both Thilo Graf Rothkirch's Cartoon Films for Warner Bros. in Berlin, Germany.
